VMH says the need isn't there

No Pleasanton hospital for now

PLEASANTON — A sharp increase in the Valley's Kaiser Health Plan membership and the defeat of Harlan Geldermann's New Town plan are working to put this city's future Valley Memorial Hospital facility far into the future.

Hospital Administrator Tom Andrews said yesterday that membership in the Kaiser Health Plan rose from 21 to 34 per cent in Livermore. He did not have the figures for the rest of the Valley, but he feels it is comparable elsewhere, too.

With competition like that from Kaiser Hospital, the previously anticipated need for expansion of Valley Memorial's hospital beds has diminished greatly.

And gone, too, was the notion that New Town would add 40,000 people to the Valley, although developer Geldermann has promised to continue his fight to build the new city.

Those two relatively new factors combined with the continued insistence of a 2 per cent growth rate around the Valley and the general lack of sewer connections make Andrews pessimistic about Valley Memorial's hospital expansion.

"It will be a long holding pattern on the Pleasanton land," Andrews said about the site the hospital has purchased at West Las Positas Boulevard and Santa Rita Road.

However gloomy the prospect looks now, the hospital will hold on to the land and not try to sell it off for residential or commercial development, he said.

"The way it stands now, there is no way you can put a even a minimum 125 bed hospital in Pleasanton," said Andrews.

Asked if that means for a period like the next 20 years, Andrews responded, "Maybe, but I don't think it (growth) will stand still that long. The land e is too valuable as a living community."

Andrews thinks the economy is partly responsible for the expansion of the Kaiser membership in Livermore. He feels it has taken away from the potential clientele of his hospital.

"Figuring Livermore at around 55,000 people now, it means that Kaiser had 11,500 people before and now they have 18,700. That's more than the population increase of the city," he said.

Another factor adding to that in the future is the recent designation of Kaiser as a health operator whose services must be offered as a fringe benefit to employees at any firm with 25 or more workers, said Andrews.

Pleasanton quells fire in paint vat

Pleasanton's fire department, four engines and 16 men, responded to a fire at Tenneco Chemicals, 5555 Sunol Blvd., at 3:47 p.m., Thursday.

Noxious fumes and heavy smoke coming from the blaze, which started in a paint vat, prompted the evacuation of personnel from nearby buildings.

Concern for safety

Chowchilla surprise: one kidnapper talks

By PETER H. KING
Associated Press Writer

OAKLAND (AP) — In a dramatic surprise, Chowchilla kidnapper James Schoenfeld took the stand Thursday and testified that safety for the 26 children and their bus driver was a primary concern in what he said was a good but crazy scheme.

Schoenfeld, speaking in a slow, calm, almost sleepy voice, said the motive was to collect ranson and he detailed the elaborate precautions taken to ensure safety for the captives in the July 1976 abduction.

The testimony marked the first time any of the three confessed kidnappers have testified publicly about the crime and came 19 months after the children burrowed their way to freedom.

Asked by his attorney, public defender Lester Gendron, why the kidnapping was committed, Schoenfeld replied: "To obtain ransom."

"Did you intend to hurt any of the children?" Gendron asked.

"No, not at all," Schoenfeld responded.

Asked what he thought of the kidnap plan in retrospect, Schoenfled, with a smile and a snicker, said: "It was a good plan, but it was crazy." "Are you sorry that you pulled this stupid caper?" Gendron asked.

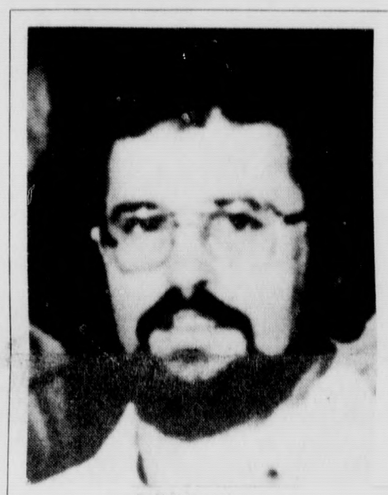

"Yes," Schoenfeld replied softly.

What did he think of the children?

"I like them all."

Schoenfeld said enough food was placed in the buried van in which the children and their bus driver were buried to last at least a day. Additional food was available for at least two more days, he said.

The Harrises held at Santa Rita until trial

PLEASANTON — Bill and Emily Harris have been transferred to Santa Rita Jail to await court appearances early next month in their upcoming trial on charges of kidnapping Patty Hearst.

The Harrises were transported to the county jail in anticipation of a March 6 pre-trial hearing at which defense motions to dismiss the case and suppress information will be heard.

The couple has been convicted of complicity in a shooting incident at a Los Angeles sporting goods store in which Hearst was allegedly involved.

The Harrises have previously awaited court dates at the Pleasanton facility. Hearst had earlier spent time at the Federal Youth Center at Camp Parks while awaiting court appearances.

Flap over track

Horsemen settle with fair

PLEASANTON — Horsemen ired at closing off of a portion of the Alameda County Fairgrounds track for a few days during recent heavy rains have apparently resolved their differences after meeting with County Fair Association management and the Horsemens Benevolent and Protective Association.

Fair manager Lee Hall told directors that a contingent of horsemen who have race horses using the local track had come into the Fair offices to complain about an area along the railing being declared temporarily off limits for workouts.

Hall explained that the shutdown was necessitated by the swamp-like conditions caused by several days of heavy rains.

Horsemen then went to the HBPA to voice their concerns.

Subsequent talks involving Hall, the HBPA and horsemen apparently led to setting-up of a line of communications for future problems. Horsemen reportedly designated one person to represent them when any problems arise.

The local track is one of the major training facilities in the west and presently stables more than 400 horses. Though used for training and stabling year-round, racing is conducted just during the two weeks of the Alameda County Fair.

Director DeWitt Wilson of the buildings and grounds committee recommended selection of Jack Bras as architect for the $550,000 Amador Livestock Pavilion. Directors approved his appointment.

Pleasanton will fine pony riders on Main

PLEASANTON — The city is no longer the center of a small ranching community and horses on Main Street are no longer welcome, city council firmly decided this week.

An ordinance banning horses on Main Street and in shopping centers was approved unanimously by council Wednesday.

Initiated by out-going mayor Bob Philcox, the ordinance does allow riders to cross Main Street to get from one area to another. But anyone riding or walking a horse "along" Main will be subject to a $50 maximum fine.

City attorney Harvey Levine noted most equestrians will receive at least one warning before being cited.

In another matter, council reasserted that no group is allowed to charge admission for an event held on city land without council's prior approval.

The unanimous vote came after city manager Clay Brown noted that soccer leagues have, in the past, requested donations from spectators coming to watch a game.

Mori's campaign chest—$19,530

Assemblyman Floyd Mori has $19,530 stored up for his run at a second full term, according to records in the Alameda County Registrar of Voters' office.

Mori collected $13,305 from July 1 to Dec. 31 last year, the most recent period required for reporting under the state's Fair Political Practices Act.

The Pleasanton Democract had $11,584 cash on hand last July 1, spent $5,358, and received the above $13,305 after July 1 for the current net total of $19,350.

The law excuses reporting contributions under $50 unless previous donations bring the cumulative total to $50 or more.

One of Mori's contributors was a prominent sports figure, Lawrence Winberg, Beverly Hills, owner of the Portland Trailblazers of the National Basketball Association. He gave $250.

Wincorp, located at 1050 Avenue of Champions, Inglewood, contributed $500.

Mori received contributions from many individual physicians, dentists' optometrists and pharmacists.

Medical groups which contributed to his campaign included Valley Memorial Hospital, $100; Sacramento Valley Pharmaceutical Association, $100; California Chiropractic Political Association, $60; and California Optometric Political Action Committee, $100.

Harvey Glasser, an Alameda doctor and BART director who operates a medical consulting firm which helps establish hospitals, gave Mori $100.

Hayward physician Harvey Neinreb, husband of Hayward Mayor Ilene Weinreb, contributed $50.

Labor unions contributing to Mori included the United Brotherhood of Carpenters, $100; California - Nevada Operating Engineers, $100; Teamsters, $250; Operating Engineers, Local 3, $200; and Teamsters Local 70, $100.

Other unions were United Transportation Union, $100; UA Local 444, $100; Berkeley Firefighters, IAFF, $50; and the Plasterer's Union, $100.

The Fund for Insurance Education gave Mori $1,000. Farmers Insurance Group in Los Angeles contributed $200 and Firemen's Fund in San Francisco gave $50.

Pleasanton insurance salesman Ben Fernandez contributed $50.

Among the few developers and realtors donating were Shapel Industries, $100; Taubman Co., $100; and Southern Alameda County Board of Realtors, $100.

Accident prompts bike path drive

PLEASANTON — Light injuries to a teenage bicyclist headed for Foothill High School yesterday morning has moved resident Jo Ann Zabik to start a petition drive for a bicycle trail along Foothill Road.

Zabik wants to hear from like - minded folks at her phone number, 846-4647.

According to a California Highway Patrol report, 17 year old Erwin Karatzer, 7865 Knollbrook, ran into a car driven by Frank Duarte, 42, of 7580 Olive Drive.

A California Highway Patrol officer said that Karatzer was riding his bicycle on the wrong side of the street and ran into Duarte's car. He was taken to Valley Memorial Hospital where he was treated and rleased.

The city's Director of Engineering Services, Don Sooby, said that even installing a two - way bicycle lane on Foothill Road won't help much. Motorists turning right tend to look only to their left out of habit before turning and certainly don't expect a cyclist coming on the "wrong" side of the street.

But Zabik thinks a two - way bicycle lane is betting than better than nothing if she can't talk the city into bike lanes on both sides of the road.

Sooby had no estimate on costs for a bike lane. He noted the county estimated $100,000 for another stretch of Foothllill Road.

Residents along Foothill Road lobbied for a bike lane a couple of years ago, but the city insisted there is no money for the project.

City officials also stated that area kids should ride their bikes and walk on streets inside the tracts when headed for Foothill High.

Idealistically they should, said Zabik, but realistically they don't. So the city ought to make Foothill Road safer, she said.

Diana Peel, who, like Zaibik, witnessed the accident yesterday, said that she participated in the earlier campaign for a bike trail and thought people should have "campaigned more".

Persistence pays off, she said. Peel was successfull in saving a stand of eucalyptus trees behind her Oak Creek Drive home, but only after "going to city hall three times a day and talking to Sooby until he agreed to save the trees."

MP duty

Camp Parks was the scene of mock civil disturbances, natural disasters and even a "Prisoner of War" camp this week as members of the Army's 170th Military Police Company bivouaced and maneuvered. The MP's, based at the Presidio in San Francisco, were largely new enlistees and troops recently returned from Korea, according to Army spokesmen. Here the troops conducted anti-riot drills and were graded on their performance.

Family life

Boys, girls together

PLEASANTON — "A lot of people are worried about how the program will be presented. It will really depend on who the teacher is as far as what values come through," commented some members of the parent health advisory committee at a review Wednesday of the controversial "Albany Plan."

Committee members were greeted by a standing-room-only audience as they discussed the "My Body is Mine" segment of the plan, which has been in operation three years in the Albany School District.

The plan lists objectives for health education instruction at each grade level from kindergarten through eighth grade.

Many panelists present Wednesday felt some of the objectives, particularly at the primary grade levels, were too advanced.

One parent in the audience commented, "I think maybe we should remember that morals should be taught at home." Her opinion was briefly interrupted by derisive murmurs, but she continued and said, " ... or at least maybe if they were, they wouldn't have to teach so much at school."

Another parent felt more attention should be given to drug education from the early grades right on through high school.

When panelists got to fifth grade objectives, a difference became evident on the question of whether boys and girls should study intimate family life subjects in the same class or in separate classes.

Dr. S.J. Ackerman, a committee member, responded, "We have fostered this separate but equal idea which leads to the 'tee-heeing' when instruction is about vital organs and functions. I've never known where this division has ever worked."

But panel member Ann Hunter rebutted by noting individual values. Two other panelists enlarged on Mrs. Hunter's comments by saying, in regards to treatment of venereal disease for example, that there is never any mention of youngsters and adults practicing self control and exercising responsibility.

Panelists felt objectives at the lower grades should emphasize nutrition more and less anatomy, physiology, and genetics.

The committee will discuss the "My Emotions Are Mine" segment of the Albany Plan on Tuesday, April 4 at the district offices.

Plea to reduce kidnap sentence

Earlier Thursday, attorneys for Schoenfeld, 26, his brother, Richard Schoenfeld, 23, and Fred Woods, 26, had begged Deegan to grant them at least some hope for parole.

"This case was a once in a lifetime thing and would never, ever, happen again," Gendron said. "I don't feel that because of this stupid act, these boys should forfeit the rest of their lives to the state.

The three defendants, noticeably pale and somber during the morning's proceedings, were joined in the courtroom by their families.

The trio took quiet notes as their attorneys made a last ditch bid to convince Deegan to overrule a mandatory sentence of life imprisonment sentence of life imprisonment without chance of parole for kidnap with bodily harm.

The three have admitted they abducted 26 Chowchilla school children abd their bus driver in July 1976 and took them 100 miles to an underground, make shift cell in the Livermore quarry owned by Woods' father.

Their captives escaped after nearly 17 hours in the stuffy, buried moving van by burrowing their way out.

Deegan found them guilty of three counts of kidnap with bodily harm, which carries the mandatory stiff sentence. But the defense argued Thursday that the judge can act to reduce the sentence.

The attorneys said Deegan could find the law unconstitutional - or the sentence cruel and unusual - in the case of the three admitted kidnappers.

Attorney Edward Merrill, representing the younger Schoenfeld, noted his client would have an average life expectancy of 50 more years.

"He's a young man whose life is in your hands," Merrill told Deegan, his voice rising.

"It seems to me that taking awat a kufe us a very servere sentence. And, in effect, sentencing him to life in prison without possibility of parole, is taking away his life."

Prosecutors contended that the careful planning which went into the crime and the cool dispatch of the culprits justified the harsh sentence.

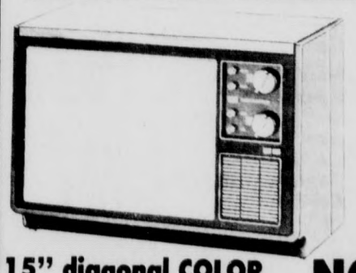

"Probation is an act of leniency," said Alameda County prosecutor Richard Haugner, "and we don't see any justification for leniency in this case. If ever the circumstances of any crime cried out for retribution, it is here."

He called the three San Francisco Peninsula men "completely amoral. They treated these victims like furniture."

Appeal due on Del Valle

PLEASANTON — Homeowners fighting the completion of the Del Valle Parkway will appeal Superior Court Judge M. O. Sabraw's ruling which allows the city and Morrison Homes to widen the proposed thoroughfare off Hopyard Road while building the Creek's Bend housing development.

Judge Sabraw made a summary jud ment against the Pleasanton Safe Streets Associat Feb. 7, six months after the 14 residents filed su. in an attempt to force the city to do an Environmental Impact Report on the parkway project.

"We still feel we have a very good case," says PSSA member Olga Morrow, "It's important to do something now before the road is built. We feel the entire community's safety is being jeopardized and we think the city is choosing to ignore the hazards of the road."

The group argues that an EIR completed on the Creek's Bend project doesn't address the effects of a widened Del Valle on nearby residents. They also claim the project will commit the city to finishing the parkway on that particular route.

The city argues that the route bordering PSSA members' homes is the most economical and safe location for the proposed traffic artery cutting through the city from Vineyard to Hopyard.

The entire Del Valle parkway isn't expected to be completed for at least 20 years.

Black family group 2 years old

DUBLIN — The Tri-Valley Black Families Association (TVBFA) was founded as a non-profit organization two years ago to provide a centralized group to which area blacks can relate plus promote better community relations between all races.

TVBFA President, Ed Swiney, said, "We knew a lot of blacks scattered throughout Livermore-Amador and San Ramon vallevs wanted to get together so the idea for our association was born."

Larmon Buckner, Dennis and Mary Ellen Bourgeois of San Ramon founded the organization.

During its formative stages, TVBFA applied for and received an official endorsement from the Alameda County Bicentennial Commission for their special "Pass to Freedom" project. The project was filed and entered in the Master Register in Washington D.C.

The "Pass to Freedom" enterprise took final shape in the form of bronze commemorative medallions. These medallions are sold to raise funds to maintain a Black History museum founded by Eugene Lasartemay. The museum, called the National Negro Historical Society, is located at 4519 Grove St., Oakland. It is the only museum in the Bay area specializing in Black History.

A "Pass to Freedom" was given to freed slaves before the Emancipation Proclamation. These passes were pieces of cloth, often burlap, stamped with the word "Free" plus the ex-slave's name and area of residence.

If the freed person was caught without his or her pass, they could be returned to slavery. In those days, a master could of his own accord free a slave or a slave could buy his or her freedom.

After the Civil Nar, most blacks who possessed freedom passes burned them.

"I suppose the ritual was similar to burning a mortgage," explained Mary Ellen Bourgeois.

However, one such pass turned up intact. A replica of that pass is on the bronze commemorative medallions.

That rare pass was issued to Elisabeth Welb of Neuse River, North Carolina in the 1830's.

She left the original pass, stamped on burlap, as a legacy to her children, Bourgeois said. It is in the possession of Louise Allen of Massachusetts. Allen is a direct descendent of Elisabeth Welb.

The National Negro Historical Society in Oakland was established to preserve literature, artwork, films, photography, recordings plus other data and articles concerning Black Americans.

Such artifacts are of special interest this week. This is the 52nd anniversary of Black History Week (Feb. 12-19).

The concept of Black History Week was conceived in 1926 by Carter G. Woodson, a black historian. His purpose was to inform people about the contributions of black people to the advancement of this country.

The "Pass to Freedom" medallions are reminders of the value of freedom, according to TVBFA precepts. To purchase a medallion ($10) or obtain further information about TVBFA, contact Tri-Valley Black Families Association, P.O. Box 2242, Dublin, California, 94566.

The original burlap "Pass to Freedom" reproduced on this bronze medallion was given to Elisabeth Welb of Neuse River, North Carolina in the 1830's to prove she was a freed slave.

Schools' advocate raps Jarvis-Gann as 'public fraud'

DUBLIN — "I think the Jarvis-Gann tax initiative is really a fraud on the public. Sixty-five percent of the property tax cuts would go to the large corporations up and down the state," former state legislator Gordon Winton alleged here last night.

Presently legislative advocate for the Association of California School Administrators, and based in Sacramento, Winton told the Diablo Chapter, Phi Delta Kappa, audience there'd be "the bloodiest damn fight among agencies to get that 1 per cent if Jarvis-Gann is passed in June."

Winton said the California Taxpayers and California Manufacturing associations are opposed to the measure to be listed as Proposition 13.

"Why are they opposed?, "asked Winton rhetorically. "Because they're afraid of the chaos it would cause if passed. They realize it could result in loss of police and fire protection.

"You know that if its approved, cities will have to cut into all of their services," the former Merced resident contended.

Winton said there have been various tax reducing measures thought of to balance the 7 to $8 million loss possible to state coffers.

One mentioned by Winton last night is a 20 percent surcharge on state income taxes.

He also said an increase in corporation taxes has been considered. Winton put little stock in the latter possibility, claiming that it would only lead to major corporations moving out of the state.

Haldeman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon's one-time chief aide, H.R. Haldeman, says in his new book he believes the former president "caused those burglars to break into" the Democratic Party's Watergate offices, and later personally tried — but failed — to erase an incriminating tape recording that became known as the "18½-minute gap," the Washington Post reports.

Haldeman's book, "The Ends of Power," is scheduled to be published Feb. 27.

Valley school aides on TV

"Volunteer Voices," a 20-minute video tape featuring six classroom volunteers at Marilyn Avenue School in the Livermore school district, will be shown on Cable TV Channel 12 Wednesday, Feb. 22 at 8:30 a.m.

The film is a panel discussion of volunteer work at the school, particularly in the Early Childhood Education program and was coordinated by volunteer Lois Ann Bedford with Dona Allen, Linda Collins, Judy Galletti, Pam Hara and Carol Pluta.

Marilyn Avenue School is in its fourth year of ECE and is one of three Livermore schools selected for 1978-79 funding for the K-6 School Improvement Plan under the recently passed AB-65.

The achievement awards are designed to be a comprehensive and respected award program to recognize and honor outstanding high school seniors whose scholastic attainment, sense of responsibility, and evidence of leadership give most promise of future success and service to society.

Sabotage

FAIRBANKS, Alaska — A 20-foot length of fuse and a black stain on the snow are evidence in what state troopers say is the second attempt to blow up the trans - Alaskan pipeline. A sabotage attempt last summer did not even dent the $7.7 billion pipe, but on Wednesday a hole was blown in the 48-inch steel line. Thousands of barrels of thick Prudhoe Bay crude oil — no exact figure was available — gushed over the tundra for hours.

Public vs. private

Just how far do we want government to go in regulating private enterprise?

That is a question debated since the beginnings of government.

It was raised recently in two Livermore cases. One involved an Oakland based firm that will soon relocate here. The other involved a Livermore developers plans to build downtown condominiums.

Both proposals came before the city council, which had to juggle the notions of private enterprise and the public good.

The Oakland Firm, Polymir Corporation, produces insulation. It is also responsible for byproducts that float in the air and fall to earth near the plant like an unsightly pile of wood shavings.

Council members correctly investigated the pollutant potential of Polymir prior to granting a permit to relocate. That's what environmental impact reports are for.

Critics raised secondary issues, however, that weren't clearly the concern of local government.

They claimed Polymir executives have been uncooperative to pollution control inspectors, and that working conditions in the Oakland plant aren't conducive to employee health. On those counts, said protestors, Livermore should have rejected the request to build here.

The condominium proposal reached city council this week. It calls for seven units downtown. One council member was skeptical. He said seven units would not generate enough in maintenance fees, to sustain upkeep of the building.

In the end Polymir won its bid for relocation. The condominiums are still pending. But questions remain?

Should council have considered the health of Polymir employees, and the firm's past association with public agencies, before agreeing to the permit? Should a developer's plans be altered or scrapped because council members feel it won't make enough money to maintain its place in the community?

Just how far should government go in weighing social, cultural and economic factors when it deals with business?

UC should stay

University of California's role at Lawrence Livermore Laboratory was challenged again this week. Protestors criticized a UC report that urges the University to continue as administrator at the lab.

The UC Nuclear Weapons Conversion Project agreed that the school should not sever ties with LLL. It simply restated its desire that nuclear weapons work there be phased out, if UC is to stay on.

At first glance the link between higher education and weapons of mass destruction appears incongruous. The conversion folks are convinced it's unethical.

But perhaps it is in the nation's interest that the university be responsible for lab weapon research and development. Those weapons are going to be built somewhere — if not at LLL, then in other facilities. At least here we can assume development is monitored by men of above-average intelligence, sensitive to diverging opinions.

It may be fair to say that a majority of the college community opposes weapons work at LLL. At UC, where free speech was born, the administration is not insulated from that sentiment. It hopefully serves as a check on university policy influencing Lawrence Lab.

The U.S. Constitution provides that ultimate military decisions rest with the chief civilian in the nation — not with soldiers. In that same light, it seems justifiable for a civilian institution like the University of California to control weapon development.

Someone must be responsible for the deadly arms business. Administration might as well come from academe. There rests our best hope for objectivity and good sense.

Jarvis plan

More panic propaganda?

Editor, The Times:

Al Fischer's Jarvis Plan article of February 9th stirs ones mind. It seems that this article is just the type of panic propaganda that inefficient government wants the public to buy. Mr. Fischer failed to mention that passage of the initiative would probably reduce the average Pleasanton homeowner's tax bill by 50 to 60 per cent. Translated into dollars, how about a reduced house payment of $60 per month? As for loss police and fire protection, no one seriously believes that. School closings, why not, we have more classrooms than we need and schools are being closed everyday. The real problem is for those elected to government to utilize what tax revenue they have in the most efficient manner possible. Could it be that less tax revenue might just mean elimination of duplicate services, reduction of over staffed government agencies and the abolishing of inefficient and wasteful welfare programs? Could it be that less tax dollars to throw away will mean more responsible and responsive government? The tax payers of this state have put both local and state government on notice- they couldn't come up with responsive tax relief, now those that pay and pay and pay will.

Focus/School programs

Crime-proofing

The third in a series of vandal-deterrent actions by the Amador school board and an upcoming ouartet of lectures sponsored by the district's adult education office call attention once again to a festering sore in suburban life.

Wanton destruction of another's property, forcible assault and burglary are on the increase almost everywhere.

The Amador district, composed of Dublin, Amador, Foothill and Valley Continuation High Schools, is doing something about vandalism and break-ins.

Trailers with watchmen have been placed on the campuses of Dublin and Amador Valley High School. A similar setup has been approved for Foothill High, where the district says a rash of break-ins have occurred in recent months.

In each situation, a watchman lives in the trailer and is hooked up to utility lines. The district pays the cost of hookup and attendant bills.

What the district "gets back" in the way of lowered burglary and vandalism bills is uncertain, though the preliminary estimates are "a lot."

The idea of an on-site watchman for those night and weekend hours apparently is working.

We can recall a school board in Southern California deliberating on the same subject a few years ago — What to do to stem the break-ins, thefts, broken windows and interior destruction.

The talk got around to hiring a watchman to patrol the school during the night and weekend hours. This was dispatched because it was far too costly.

Another board member suggested a custodian/watchman with a dog or just a dog (Such as a German Shepherd or Doberman).

We're not certain how the discussion ended but the idea of placing a dog on school grounds or in school buildings was quickly dropped — more out of fear that constituents would think trustees were trying to create an authoritarian state (aia Bull Connors and his police dogs several years ago in the south).

We have seen school districts where 3 p.m. on Friday signaled breaking of the first window.

There are administrators and school board members in this state who are climbing the walls trying to figure a solution to the destruction wreaked on their schools and the general general lawlessness exhibited by youngster and adult alike.

Amador Adult Education's role in the community as regards combating vandalism, assault and burglaries, will be emphasized through a four-part series beginning next Wednesday.

Four problems will be discussed by officers of the Pleasanton Police Department.

On the 22nd, Officer Jim Balch will talk about burglaries— "How to Make a Burglar's Life Miserable."

On subsequent Wednesdays, the topics will be, in order, "Rape, the Female Victim," "Juveniles and the Law," and "Law Enforcement in a Changing Society."

The presentations will be made by Officer Pat Nordin and, the last one, by Lt. Dave Freeman.

There is no charge for any but Valley residents wishing to attend may pre-register at the Adult Education offices at Amador High (Located in the parking lot off of Santa Rita Road).

The lecture series will include speakers, demonstrations, displays, films and a question and answer period. Each one is scheduled to start at 7:30 p.m. in the Amador High auditorium.

For more information, call the adult ed offices at 462-0022.

One, if not all of the presentations should be well worth your time.

Foul play?

Editor, The Times:

How naive does the Livermore Police Department think we are? I would like to know how a badly decomposed body found wrapped in an old carpet (to quote the police) in a shed behind a machine shop last week, could be termed as having died from "natural causes." I would have to assume from this, that it is not impossible for a person to wrap oneself in an old carpet, place oneself in a specific place and wait to die from natural causes. This, all without any help from a second party. If anything smells of foul play, this is it. It seems to me that the Livermore Police Department had better look again and find the real cause of death.

In his steps

Editor, The Times:

I heartily agree with James M. Morton and his letter in The Times this morning.

What good does it do your readers to read the description of the accusation of Mr. Lindgren? What purpose does it serve? Has it aided in his capture? No, for he has already been responsible enough to turn himself in.

I suggest that the editor and the publisher of The Times read "In His Steps" by Charles M. Sheldon to learn the truly good (God's) way to run a newspaper.

Scare tactics

Editor, The Times:

The "scare tactics" being used by both County and State Governments to defeat the Jarvis-Gann Tax Limitation Initiative, which is due to appear on the June ballot as Proposition 13, are typical of the ways in which distrust of government begins. The County, for example, claims that passage of proposition 13 would cut county income by 70 percent (Oakland Tribune 12 Feb. 78). This is a very interesting claim since only 36.3 percent of Alameda County's income is derived from the property tax in the first place according to "The Alameda County Financial Overview for 1977-1978 pg. 7, which is published by the County Administrator for the Board of Supervisors. If the Jarvis Initiative were to cut the property tax by 50 percent, this would only represent an 18.15 percent reduction in county revenue from the property tax; A good example of how figures don't lie, but liars can figure.

The total county-wide budget requirement for Alameda County for the 1977-78 year was 13.1 percent greater than it was for the preceeding year. This represents an increase in expenditures of approximately 51 million dollars. The way that this increase was funded is best illustrated by the following direct quote from the letter of transmittal of the proposed County Budget from Loren Enoch, County Administrator, to the Board of Supervisors dated 3 MaY 1977: "The recommended Budget, subject to several important assumptions, appears to be capable of being financed with the existing tax rate of $3.11. This is because the County Assessor has forecast an increase of 15 percent in property values this year."

All this points to the fact that there is virtually no limit on government spending, and government spending can never be controlled without placing a limit on government income. Government income is svnonymous with taxation, and there can never be a limit or reduction of taxes without a corresponding limit or reduction of government income. With property taxes increasing at a rate between two and three times that of the consumer price index, it is abundantly clear that a Tax Limitation Measure such as the Jarvis-Gann Initiative is long overdue.

round the town

ON BOARD QUEEN ELIZABETH 2 — There were ships, such as "Normandie," designed like luxury hotels, with furnishings to match the world's finest inns.

It was the "France" which brought dining to a form of excellence never achieved, before or since, at sea. And it was the "United States" which combined comfort with speed to get passengers across the Atlantic in something less than five days.

In time, all of these sea-going ventures would fail ... the "Normandie" gutted by fire in New York harbor, the "United States" abandoned after an investment of some 77 million dollars; the "France" docked only after its crew tried a dramatic mutiny at sea to force the French government to continue its subsidy.

Having conquered the seas, survived wars and completed — as did the "Aquitania" over 700 sucessful Atlantic crossings in a career spanning 36 years — the great liners came, with few exceptions, to an inglorious end. For the most famous of them all, the mighty Queens of Cunard's line, their fate was particularly unworthy.

Launched before World War II, "Queen Mary" and "Queen Elizabeth" were as much a part of the Allied war effort as any two vessels in history. Together they transported almost two million troops, most of them American GI's headed for the European front. In nearly all of those crossings, the Queens sailed without escort, using their great speed of 31 knots and more as their only defense against enemy ships.

Converted back to peacetime use after the war, the two Queens joined the "United States" and the "France" for a 12-year period of unprecedented popularity, and profit, for trans-Atlantic passage. The United Statesof America, often a buyer of luxury liners but never a builder, finally entered that competition in 1952 with a ship that would carry the nation's colors, it's name, and some 40 million dollars in taxpayers' subsidy. At 40 knots top speed, the "United States" was by far the world's fastest ocean liner, traversing the Atlantic in a remarkable three and one-half days.

In 1958, 1,200,000 passengers sailed the Atlantic, a total never before achieved. In 1969, six million people flew above the Atlantic in jet liners, taking hours, not days, to reach their destination.

The 100-year battle to build the fastest ship afloatthus came to naught. The memory of John Pierpont Morgan trying to gain a one-knot advantage over the ships of Kaiser Wilhelm II now seemed dim, even childish. The beautiful appointments of Italy's "Michelangelo" and "Raffaello" seemed terribly unimportant to a 1960's generation of travellers who could have dinner in New York's Waldorf, and lunch next day in London's Savoy.

The time of the great ships had come to an end. It would mark also the passing of time itself, that period when Americans splattered their expensive luggage with ship's labels as a mark of distinction, when the departure or arrival of a great ship was an occasion of high social (and economic) importance for the harbor city.

In his excellent book, "The Liners" (published by Putnam) Terry Coleman captures the excitement of those years. He tells of high times and of bad times; he recalls the politics, the economics, the great power stuggles which dominated trans-Atlantic passage for over 100 years. But in the end, Coleman has to write that the people who built them, those who sailed them, and even the ships themselves, are now gone.

"Queen Elizabeth 2" survives because, its officers will proudly relate, "we are not a means of transport; we are rather a form of entertainment at sea, interrupted periodically with interesting ports of call." In a future column, I will try to share with you just some of the statistics which make QE2 "the busiest all-day entertainment facility in the world today." It is a claim most exhausted, overstuffed passengers will not dispute.

The important fact is that, in 1978, QE2 will show a handsome profit for its investors. This 62-day cruise — from New York to China and return with ports of call in a dozen countries — is booked solid to the 1400-passenger limit which QE2 sets for its luxury cruises. (The ship can carry 1800 paying guests on a trans-Atlantic run.)

Sleek, modern, efficient, the QE2 is no more like the opulent liners of yesteryear than Ceasar's Palace is a copy of Buckingham Palace. It is in recognizing that difference where the British-based Cunard Line hopes to keep alive the latest -- and many say the last — member in a proud lineage of globe-circling vessels.

Somehow, you get the feeling that even those millions who will never sail aboard QE2, still hope she survives.

Above all, they care

Dublin-San Ramon residents are fortunate it seems to me.

For one thing, they have a dedicated core of people watching out for the best interests of those communities.

To name a few — There's the Dublin San Ramon Services District (DSRSD), Dublin Chamber of Commerce, Citizens for Dublin Cityhood, San Ramon Homeowners Association, the San Ramon Valley Planning Commission and supervisors Valerie Raymond (Alameda County, first district) and Eric Hasseltine (Contra Costa County, fifth district).

Also, people affiliated with the Dublin Historical Preservation Association (DHPA) work incredibly hard to get Heritage Center ready for preserving Dublin history for future generations.

Then there was the Save Our Children Association in San Ramon. They fought for and won safer crossings along Broadmoor Drive for school children.

The San Ramon Committee for Crime Prevention and DSRSD are combining forces to alert residents to the scope of the vandalism problem in those communities, seek citizen input and try to arrive at solutions.

I often see public servants from these groups, plus individuals mentioned, in action since my news beat covers Dublin-San Ramon. This beat includes Alameda and Contra Costa counties.

Local public servants are often criticized for real and imagined imperfections. But they are usually the first to admit they are not perfect.

The important thing is they care enough about the communities to try and keep them worthwhile places in which to live — often bucking against great odds of public apathy and misunderstanding.

And although they often have to take a lot of guff from disgruntled citizens, they usually retain their "cool" and try working problems out in a civilized manner.

Most people would balk at attending the number of meetings that public officials (and reporters) have to attend. Some night sessions often last until midnight or later.

While John Q. Public is home watching the ball game or M.A.S.H., public servants are trying to hammer out community policies, programs, solve problems, etc. Public interest and participation is usually at a minimum.

Not only are these frequent sessions long — they often lean toward the boring side. But problems about ground-floor issues have to be ironed out no matter how dull the subject matter. And a dedicated core of people do their best to get the job done.

While some long-term deliberations may seem like nit-picking, boards of directors and other officials are usually simply interested in making sure there are no loopholes that could cause grief to residents in years to come.

The DSRSD Recreation Department has a staff of young adults who spend countless hours creating and implementing new programs and activities that will interest all age groups year-round.

The Dublin Chamber of Commerce is constantly seeking ways to help better the community. Their office is one of the most efficiently run, cooperative chambers in the Valley.

Dublin Public Library staff is always on the lookout for ways to improve their already excellent services.

Space doesn't permit detailing all of the various organizations and individuals and what they do. But it would be great if, during this new year, better lines of communication could be set up between some public servants and residents.

For starters, it might help if plain English replaced "legalese" in reports, contracts, etc. Perhaps the layperson could understand more clearly what is going on in public agencies if he or she could decipher the statements. Everybody might become better informed on public issues if they could understand the language.

But aside from that, maybe it would help if all of us just tried "walking a mile in the other person's moccasins."

I must add the public servants are working for a very nice group of residents.

"Worst case of Russian flu I've seen!"

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My husband is hooked on sleeping pills and still can't sleep. I worry because he often takes nightcaps before his other medication. He says he isn't worried about anyting and that he's always been a poor sleeper. However, it seems to me that since his sister died last year he has been nervous and has trouble relaxing at night. Nothing seems to work for him. Do you have any suggestions. L.O.

DEAR L.O.: If you husband takes any alcohol at night, even one nightcap, I'd strongly suggest he take no sleeping pills. The combination can be leahal as both alcohol and his medication are sedatives. According to a recent repot, about 25,000 sleeping pill users end up in emergency wards each year and about 5,000 die. Many of these deaths are the result of accidential doses of pills in combination with alcohol.

Most pills are ineffective after a week or two of prolonged use and many have exactly the opposite effect leaving the user with a worse night's leep. If you husband has been taking this medication for a year, he should see his doctor and see if he can gradually break the habit.

Many doctors feel we place far too much emphasis on sleep. Studies have shown that persons who sleep six hours or less tend to be energetic, ambitious, decisive, socially adapted, extroverted and more satisfied with their lives. There are documented cases of people sleeping with only two hours a night.

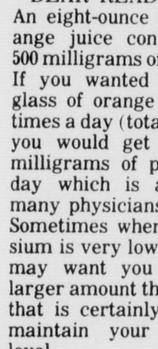

Depression is one of the main causes of insomnia. Your husband may associate sleep with dying, which may be one of the reasons he unconsciously resists sleep. He'd be wise to get out of bed if he can't fall asleep after 10 to 15 minutes and read a book or take a walk. Dr. Laverne Johnson, a sleep expert, says an effective cure for insomnia is to keep people awake and out of bed until they're sleepy.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I have two sons in their middle teens who are as different from each other as any two youngsters could possibly be. The younger is really a slob and seems to take pride in paying no attention to his personal appearance. The elder boy spends a lot of time secretly admiring, or perhaps criticizing his image in a full-length mirror. He makes a point of freshing up before dinner and if we have company, he puts on a clean shirt. Are these sharp differences significant? O.R.

DEAR O.R.: I'm sure as he grows older, your younger son will modify his resistance to tidiness to some extent. He may be rebelling against you, and the adult world, or against his brother's neatness.

Caring for one's personal appearance is usually a positive sign of good mental health. In youngsters, however, failure to live up to their parents' view of what they think they should look like doesn't mean serious mental problems. Youngsters who refuse to comb their hair or put on a clean shirt for company are usully simply expressing adolescent resentment. They may claim to be upset by the emphasis on superficiality and may accuse thier parents of disregarding character and "true values" while they focus on exterirors, but this is just another way of expressing their disenchantment with the adult world. It's their way of giving it a swift kick.

Lengthy or frequent mirrorgazing so typical of 16- and 17-year-olds is another side of the coin. This preoccupation indicates insecurity and a general lack of self-confidence. Both of these problems, if they are problems to you, will pass in time.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been taking Hydropress 50 for over 18 years and it has done a great job in keeping my blood pressure under control. Recently, I was bothered with nausea and dizziness and my doctor said it was because the Hydropress robbed me of potassium. He prescribed potassium, but I was wondering it there isn't a way to replace it in my diet, instead of with medication.

DEAR READER — Yes. An eight-ounce glass of orange juice contains about 500 milligrams of potassium. If you wanted to drink a glass of orange juice three times a day (total 24 ounces) you would get about 1500 milligrams of potassium a day which is about what many physicians prescribe. Sometimes when the potassium is very low, the doctor may want you to take a larger amount than that, but that is certainly enough to maintain your potassium level.

I think it is a good idea for everyone who is taking any of the medicines that eliminate water (diuretics) to eat plenty of fresh fruit and drink fresh fruit juices. That will help keep the potassium level normal despite losing some through the diuretic action of the medicine on the kidneys.

Unfortunately, processing food robs our natural foods of potassium and tends to cause all of us to eat an artificially high sodium diet.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have a problem that really bothers me and my whole family. It is a hair problem. My 20-year-old son has a spot the size of a 50-cent piece on the back of his head that is completely bald, a perfect round circle. I noticed it about a month ago and have been to two doctors about it.

They had a big, long name for it, saying to me it meant a spot without hair. They said there was no cure for it and that sometimes the hair would come back in four to six months. I would very much appreciate all the information you could give me and what causes it. It has gotten a little larger in size since I first noticed it.

DEAR READER — I'm sure that long name was alopecia areata, which means a spot with no hair, as your doctors have told you. There are a few medical disorders that have to be ruled out when such a spot is noted, such as ringworm, but since he has seen two doctors I'm sure such conditions are not present.

In most cases the cause is not known. The spot comes and may enlarge, then finally go away. Because new spots may develop while the old one is growing new hair it ususally takes at least six months for the problem to disappear. The hair that first grows back is often white, but it will soon regain its normal color in most cases.

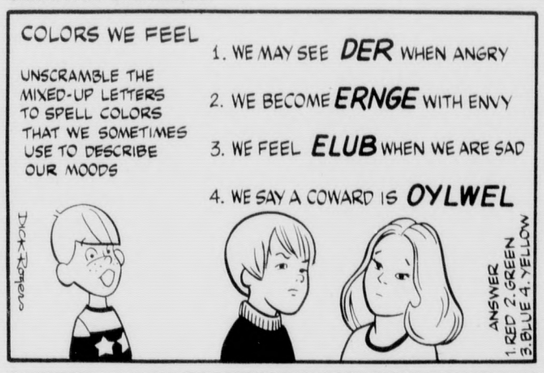

Worry or nervous tension can be a factor in causing such episodes.

"Why don't finesses work for me?" groaned the Unlucky Expert. "For everyone else they do."

The Unlucky Expert had ruffed the second heart, led a trump to dummy's king and finessed the jack one the way back. West had scored his queen and led a third heart. South trumped that and was now down to one trump while he still had to knock out the ace of diamonds. There was no way for him to pull West's nine of spades without allowing the fourth heart to take the setting trick.

We will concede that if the trump finesse had worked, South would have made five odd. But South ahd contracted for four and he should have taken the best play to make that contract.

The best play wasn't at all complicated. A suit breaks 3-2 some 68 percent of the time. A finesse works just 50 percent of the time. South should just cash the ace and king of trumps and knock out the ace of diamonds.

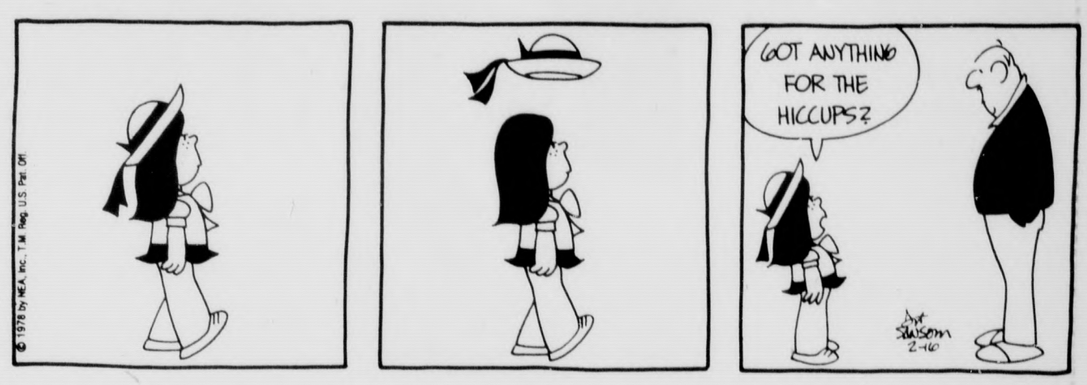

This would give him time to collect all his diamond and club tricks before the defense would be able to establish a heart. He would lose that queen of trumps, but he wouldn't lose his contract.

Bibles in taxis

ASHVILLE, N.C. (AP) — While riding a cab in Chicago some time ago, allergist Claude A. Frazier noticed a Bible lying on the seat beside the driver. An idea struck him: Why not a project to place Bibles in taxicabs, much as the Gideons put them in hotel rooms?

He contacted the American Bible Society, whose regional offices in major cities began studying the feasibility of placing Scripture portions in cabs around the country. Already, a pilot project is under way in Ashville. Says Frazier:

"People read newspapers in cabs. Why shouldn't they read the Bible?" ——

Jewish-Moslem dialogue

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A delegation from the three branches of American Judaism was in Egypt this week to open a dialogue with Moslem leaders, the first such officially representative U.S. Jewish visit in history.

It reflected a surge of initiatives both by Jews and Christians to enliven relations with Moslems, sparked by their rising influence in the world and their role in a sought-for peace in the Middle East.

All three monotheistic faiths find their origins in the Bible.

While the political efforts for peace temporarily were snarled over differences between the governments of Israel's Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egypt's President Anwar Sadat, the new religious contacts bloomed.

Recent events "have opened new possibilities for serious and fruitful encounter between Moslems and Jews," says Rabbi Saul I. Teplitz of Woodmere, N. Y., president of the Synagogue Council of America.

He heads the 12-member council delegation, embracing Conservative, Orthodox and Reform wings of Judaism, with meetings scheduled over a two-week period with Islamic and other religous leaders in Egypt.

While the Middle East conflict has obscured the fact, "Judaism and Islam share significant spiritual and cultural links," Teplitz says.

"It is our hope that as a result of our visit to Egypt, both faith communities will be encouraged to draw on their respective religious traditions to help heal the wounds caused by 30 years of political conflict and hasten the day of peace."

About 200 Jews still live in Egypt, compared to an estimated 65,000 to 75,000 there at Israel's establishment in 1948.

In a kindred development, the National Council of Churches, including most major Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations, recently set up its first task force to foster Christian-Moslem relations.

The unit's director, the Rev. Dr. Byron L. Haines, says U. S. Christians are taking "increasing interest" in Moslems, whose numbers have grown swiftly in America lately, along with the mounting sway of Islamic Arab nations in international affairs.

Conferences and study seminars of Christians and Moslems are taking place around the country, Haines says, noting that some local churches are offering their buildings to Moslems groups for worship and meetings.

So far, the agency has held two meetings, begun issuing a bi-monthly newsletter and compiled a list of about 300 U.S. Moslem organizations, but says the gathering of information still has a long ways to go, as does development of literature on the subject.

"The oneness of God is central to the belief of the Moslem and the Christian," Haines says. Despite differences over the role of Jesus and over the Islamic Scriptures, the Koran, Haines says both faiths worship the God of Abraham, Moses and Jesus.

Rev. Higdon has held several successful pastorates in Washington, Oregon and California, and is widely acclaimed as a gospel preacher. He has distinguished himself as a very efficient administrator.

The Rev. Matthew C. Faulkner of St. Matthew's said, "We are extremely fortunate and blessed to have him as a guest speaker."

In addition to Rev. Higdon, appearing as guests again will be the "highly acclaimed musical group known as the Gospel Dynamics," according to Rev. Faulkner. "Come one, come all," says the minister, "and enjoy this great spiritual experience."

Gospel Dynamics is composed of fifty singers, high school and college age young people from all over the Bay Area, five of whom live in Pleasanton.

The president of the group, Sondra Alexander, says their itinerary is tremendous, with at least fifty engagements scheduled between now and August. At that time, they are scheduled to go to Washingtron, D.C. for a gospel music workshop.

Ida Coleman of Pleasanton is the director of the group which formed about three years ago from the Beaconlight Youth Choir at the Seventh Day Adventist Church in Richmond, Calif.

The group sings for churches of many different denominations, and recently cut a record called "Jesus I'll Do," which they plan to distribute through music stores throughout the Bay Area in Mid-March, as well as being available by contacting Ida Coleman at 462-4152. After the worship service there will be a potluck dinner in the dining hall.

Had your 22 gallons yet?

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — They drank it in Babylon 8,000 years ago. The pilgrims may have decided to land at Plymouth Rock because they were running out of it. Americans are crazy about it. Spell it B-E-E-R.

Figures being assembled by the U.S. Brewers Association will show that more Americans than ever are quaffing the "beverage of moderation," says association vice president George W. Ososke.

He estimated that Americans, averaging more than 22 gallons a year, downed about 4.4 billion gallons of brew last year — about a billion more than in 1967. The Bureau of Census estimates the nation's population increased by about 18½ million in that period.

Americans are drinking more beer because they have more leisure time and more recreational activities that suggest ingesting something stronger than water or soft drinks, Ososke theorized.

Whatever the reason, in the United States or anywhere that grain is grown, beer is entangled with history.

"Beer is liquid bread," says Gustav W. Chyba, brewmaster of the year-old, 16-acre Anheuser-Busch brewery at Fairfield east of here.

Although nutritionists say that isn't literally true, records indicate that many cultures believed the relationship between beer and risen bread to be more than just nodding.

Anthropologists have interpreted inscriptions on clay tablets dating back to Babylonia in 6,000 B.C. as showing the preparation of a simple beer, a crude variation of the process of beer making today — alcoholic fermentation of a grain, plus flavorings.

In Egypt of the Pharoahs, beer was considered important in daily diet. The daily food allotment of ordinary people of the time included four loaves of bread and two jugs of beer. Mothers delivered lunch — including beer — to their sons in school.

In China 2,300 years before Christ the peasants called their beer "kiu." The ancient Incas, long before the discovery of South America, even had light and heavy beers, which they called either "chicha" or "sora."

The classical Greeks kept careful records of their beermaking, and described recipes that spread to the Rome. Beer is believed to have been discovered independently in Northern Europe.

Columbus is said to have been given a gift on the Central American coast of an Indian beer made from corn, a cousin of the beverage known to the Indians of North America for many years.

Reference works claim that the Pilgrims fleeing England in the Mayflower in 1620 suffered an emergency of the first order, and chose Plymouth to start their New World.

A manuscript dated 1622 went, "...For we could not now take time for further search or consideration, our victuals being much spent, especially our beer..."

Americans today drink a modern version of the beer introduced by German brewers in the 1900s. But, although traditonally foreign beer tends toward darker, heavier brews, the American taste is for lighter beers.

"Light beer is more refreshing and less filling than the European beers," said Chyba, an Austrian. "That's what Americans want."

Estimates are that the new low-calorie "light" brews have taken about 15 percent of the American market. Officials say women may be drinking a large percentage of that amount.

Chyba and others in the business agree that not much American-brewed beer is exported for consumption by foreign beer drinkers. Most American beer leaving the country goes to American military installations and spots where Americans are the customers.

However, imported brews have made tremendous advances in this country in the last generation — from 7.7 million gallons in 1956 to 73.9 million gallons in 1976, according to government figures.

Most people in the business feel the increase is related to increased American travel abroad combined with a feeling that "prestige" goes with a foreign label.

The top imported beer in America is Heineken. Some 28.3 million gallons of the Netherlands-brewed liquid, both dark and light, were imported in 1976, according to Tom O'Neill, president of the National Association of Alcoholic Beverage Importers.

AV leads EBAL matmen into NCS

Today and tomorrow the Dublin High School gymnasium will be crowded with wrestlers from eighty Northern California schools competing in the North Coast Section Tournament.

The East Bay Athletic League is represented by thiry matmen, and according to Amador Valley coach Ron Blanton, they might surprise a few people.

"We're a strong league. The EBAL will be very respectable," he predicted.

"The Diablo Valley Athletic League will not dominate it like it did last year," he challenged.

Clayton Valley High, a DVAL school, is the defending champion, while another DVAL contender, San Lorenzo, is ranked first in the North Coast Section this season.

The Dons placed nine grapplers in the tournament, while Monte Vista added eight. Livermore is represented by six wrestlers.

Granada, after losing over half of it's lineup because of ineligibility, still managed to enter it's 123 pounder Roy Davis, who was undefeated this season, and is rated number one is his weight class.

"It's going to be tough. With 32 brackets, anything can happen. There's going to be some upsets for sure," Blanton said.

"I really don't know what our chances are, and anything can happen," Livermore coach Ed King agreed.

King is counting on his four seniors to pull through for the Cowboys. Nashi Piazza, rated number one in the 148 weight division, twin brothers Dale, 168, and Darryl, 178, Hansen, and 194 pounder Dave Farfan are the departing grads.

I'm going to miss all those guys, and I'm going to miss their wins too," King said.

"It's their last shot, and I think we'll do fine," he added.

King speculated that Piazza has a good possibility of taking it. He finished third in last year's meet.

Blanton guaranteed that his 148 pounder Mitch Heredia will challenge Piazza in the finals. Heredia is also a senior, and lost only three matches this season, two to Piazza.

"He's one of the most intense wrestlers I've ever had. He never stops. They guy is extremely well conditioned and never concedes anything. He never gives it up. He's great," Blanton praised.

Farfan is expected by his coach do do alright in his matches also.

"He's a super kid. He's the hardest worker I have. Right along with Piazza, he gives 110%," King said.

The lighter Hansen Dale, is in one of the toughest weight classes, according to King.

Darryl, still recovering from a bout with the flu, is questionable.

"I'm not sure what will happen. In the EBAL, nobody even gave him a match all season. He's there mentally," King said.

Amador's Steve Potts, 115, is in another tough weight class, according to a confident Blanton.

"There's a lot of good wrestlers in that division. But his chances are excellent. He's going to have to wrestle for it though. He's got the tools for it if he puts it all together," Blanton explained.

"I can't say enough about him. He had 110 wins in his four years, and that's an unbelievable record."

Another graduating Don is 141 pounder Mike Larsen, also undefeated in the EBAL.

"He's really developed. He's done a great job this year," Blanton noted.

Senior Ernie Zumbach tops off the Amador slate in the 194 division, and is predicted by Blanton to set the school record for pins.

"He assumes responsibility and leadership for the team," Blanton said.

Monte Vista coach Randy Knudsen is uncertain about how his eight wrestlers will do in qualifying for the upcoming State Meet in March.

"It's hard for me to predict because they're all juniors and sophmores," Knudsen said.

In the competition for Monte Vista are Marios Castro, 98, Ramy Tleimat, 130 Toby Prehn, 141, Layne Maheu, 148, Norman Oldroyed, 157, Jim Fritz, 168, and heavyweight Dave Frohnem, who took first in the league this season.

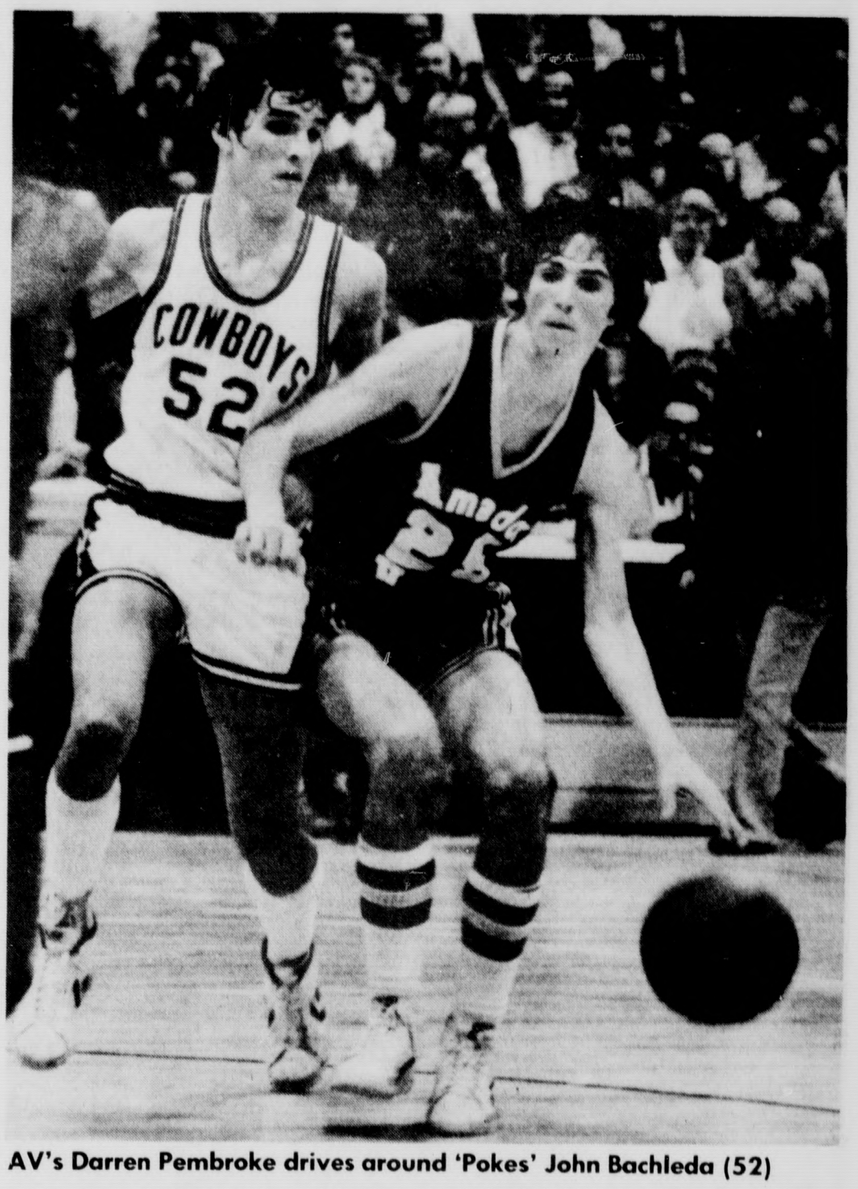

The younger members of the Livermore contigent are 105 pounder Rob Baird, and Kirk Alman at 130.

In the running for the host school Dublin are the EBAL champion Sean Kennedy at 178, and 115 pounder Shannon Grisham.

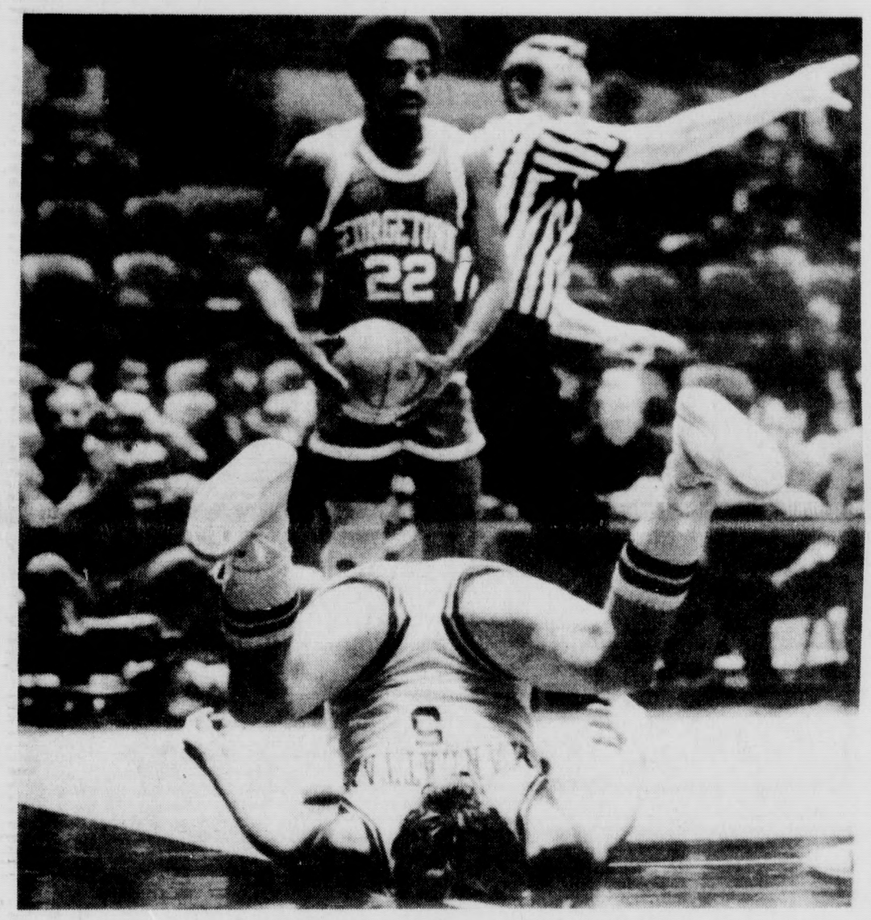

Rounding out the Dons squad are Mark Hanna, 98, the younger Heredia, freshman Chris, 105, Randy Kendall, 123, Dennis Gulcher,130.

The competition begins at 10:00 a.m. both days, and the finals are scheduled for 7:00 p.m. tomorrow.

Amador pick in playoff

No matter who wins today's soccer playoff match between East Bay Athletic League champion Amador Valley and Catholic League champ De LaSalle it's bound to be a boost for valley soccer.

The match is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. on the Amador Valley soccer field.

Despite the fact De LaSalle is located in Concord there are three players from the valley on the Spartan squad.

Fullback Rick Allemania is from Livermore and forwards Chris Kanrells and Phil Figone are from Dublin. De LaSalle coach Jan Thyrring is a resident of Livermore and is a former youth soccer coach in the valley.

Amador Valley is heavily favored in this match, in what may be a preclude to an eventual North Coast Section soccer playoff.

The Dons won the EBAL, considered one of the toughest prep leagues in the Bay Area, by coming on strong the last half of the season. Amador Valley was 12-1-1 in EBAL play, the loss and the tie coming back in December. Amador Valley also won the Ballistic United Amador Valley Holiday Soccer Tournament in late December.

The Dons are paced by the EBAL's leading scorer, Joe Correia. Correia led the league in scoring with 12 goals and added a good number of assists too. Marty Espinoza was one of the EBAL's leading assist men, garnering nine.

Kevin Crow is another standout for the Dons. Despite being injured half the season, he came back to score three times against Monte Vista in the season finale.

The Dons are a well-balanced unit, as they tallied 50 goals and allowed only five in league action. Most of their victories since December have been by shutouts.

Amador Valley coach Mike Geib considers his present team to be the "best balanced" he's had.

Thyrring is a realist and admits his team's chances of winning aren't that good.

"I don't think we can beat Amador Valley," he frankly admitted. "However, we expect to be competitive and gave a good account of ourselves."

The Spartans were more than competitive in the Catholic loop rolling up a 10-0 mark and defeating a rugged Moreau squad twice, 1-0 and 2-0.

De LaSalle was eliminated early in the Amador Valley Tournament but Thyrring feels his team have improved greatly since then.

"We have improved quite a bit since then," he said. "We have some players with experience now and they are much better then they were in the begining of the season."

The Spartans also had an impressive offensive and defensive record in the CAL, scoring 59 times and allowing five goals.

Dons near crown, meet hungry Cal

The Amador Valley High basketball team hopes to ride into San Ramon on the same high that carried them past Livermore Wednesday, although coach Skip Mohatt is quick to point out it won't be easy.

The Dons, who cinched a tie for their fifth straight East Bay Athletic League title with a 52-49 overtime win in Livermore in the 'Pokes gym, face the California Grizzlies in what may shape up to be a wilder battle than they bargained for.

The Grizzlies are set on making the playoffs, which is a possibility if Livermore can defeat Monte Vista tonight in Danville.

In two more season - ending contests, third - place Granada (8-5) hosts Foothill (3-10), and Dublin (3-10) treks to San Ramon (4-9). Neither game will have a bearing on the playoffs. Following is a wrapup of Wednesday night's action:

Amador Valley 52, Livermore 49 (OT)

Chris Kearns rebounded a missed shot and followed it through the hoop in overtime to break a 45-45 tie, while Rick Howard added a pair of free throws with :45 left to seal the Dons' win over the Cowboys.

The game was one of the most intensely played contests of the season, yet both coaches felt their squads could have played better.

"I don't feel we executed that well," said Mohatt. "We played very hard and compensated for the lack of execution with hustle."

"Against Cal, we've got to look at it as every bit as important a game as Livermore was. We have to execute better and play better than we did against Livermore. Cal is a very talented team."

Mohatt, though, was pleased with his team's attitude towards the game with the 'Pokes, who whipped the Dons 62-43 last time out.

"The pressure was on our kids because they've won the title so many times," he said. "We spent time preparing for this game from strictly a basketball point of view, and not from a psychological point of view. Livermore played very hard. It was, I thought, an excellent championship game."

Unusual, though. The first quarter saw offensive execution at its deepest, but the remainder of the game crawled at close to a snail's pace. AV took a 17-16 lead at the break, but Livermore came back to go up 30-28 at halftime. In the second half, the Dons scored a total of 17 points to the Cowboys' 15.

Forward Rick Howard led the Dons with 24 points, playing what Mohatt termed "the best game of his life." A consistent performer for the past two years the Dons, Howard blossomed when picking up the slack of foul - plagued center Ken Noble, who sat out most of the second half with four fouls and scored one point on the evening. Mohatt praised the play of reserve pivot man Greg Kragen. "He didn't show in the statistics, but his rebounding against guys like (Livermore's Brian) Schweiger and (Dick) Patterson helped out. We depend a lot on Noble, and Kragen did an excellent job in filling in."

Howard sprained his ankle late in the game and played the entire overtime injured. Mohatt mentioned he may have to sit out the Cal game and possibly the rest of the year.

Livermore coach John Erceg, when informed of Howard's injury and what it may do to the Cowboys' own chances of gaining a share of the title, said "I'm just mainly thinking about or game with Monte Vista. We've got one day to prepare and regroup for them. We're all pretty down here. I'm sure they'll be ready for us because we beat them so bad last time. I'm sorry that Howard's hurt, and I hope he recovers from his injury."

Erceg commented on his team's play, saying, "I think we were get-

One too many fights for "The Greatest"

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Muhammad Ali went to the well once too often, and the result was one of the most monumental tragedies in sports.

"It's easy. A couple of more $3 million-plus paychecks against pushovers and then maybe a $10 million killing for a fourth fight against Ken Norton, win or lose." That was the way the beautiful picture was painted to the rusting 36-yearold boxing champion of the world.

It looked inviting to Ali, although he fell into long periods of moodiness. There was one catch in it. Ali and all the brains and wellwishers around him reckoned without the grit and determination of a ring-raw, 24-year-old ex-Marine named Leon Spinks.

They forgot that the gristly Spinks, 27 pounds lighter than the champion, with a four-inch shorter reach and only seven pro fights to throw against Ali's 17 years' experience, grew up in the ghetto of North St. Louis.

He learned his art on the streets where strong fists and a stouter heart were the main sources of survival. In these alley brawls, the more you got hit and the deeper the hurt the fiercer you fought back.

This was the scenario of the 15-round title fight Wednesday night in the Hilton Pavilion when Spinks, unawed by the Ali mystique and calling upon his rudimentary street skills, hammered out a split decision over the world's ring idol.

"Ali was duped. Everybody around him told him this kid would be a pushover," said Gene Kilroy, one of the champion's advisers.

Ali manfully shouldered the blame. "I played around too much in the early rounds," he said. "What I didn't figure on was his stamina andkhis will to win."

In the next breath, the aging ex-titleholder talked of another Ali miracle, a comeback that could make him the first man ever to win the heavyweight title three times.

He had his championship taken away in 1967 because of refusal to enter military service and had to win it back after 3½ years of mandated idleness. Another comeback now at age 36? It's unthinkable. Time has caught up with one of the finest fighting machines and most electrifying personalities the game has seen.

To attempt a return would only compound the saddest of tragedies.

What brought about such a sorrowful closing chapter to so brilliant a career? Why couldn't Ali, with all his wealth and success, have followed the example of Gene Tunney and Rocky Marciano and retired at the peak of the mountain?

There were two ideal moments for him to make the proper decision. The first on that stormy morning October 30, 1974, in Africa when he regained his title from George Foreman, the second Oct. 1, 1975, after he had beaten Joe Frazier a second time in the "Thrilla in Manila," one of the hardest fought of all heavyweight battles.

But Ali couldn't quit. Unknown to many, although he had earned close to $50 million in fight purses, the champion found himself financially strapped. His liquid assets were negligible.

How could this come about?

Ali lived high, spent freely, trusted almost everyone.

Two divorces cost him dearly. Close friends say he was a sucker, a soft touch, a sucker for the sad story. The extent of his charitable donations and altruism were immense.

Friends say he invested in schemes that never materialized. He maintained a huge entourage of some 25 people. The rumor that Ali was being bled by the Muslims seems unfounded. Herbert Muhammad took one-third as manager — no more.

Round Hill hosts Coventry tourney

BOSTON — The Sarah Coventry Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament, one of the most richest eventson the LPGA circuit, is returning to Round Hill Country Club in Alamo for a second year.

Return of the $100,000 women's classic was announced this week by Aileen Van Tyle, vice president of the sponsoring national jewelry firm who said the five day event will run from Sept. 13 through Sept. 17 at the Alamo complex.

The 72-holes of championship play are preceeded by a celebrity-dotted pro-am. This year's edition of the Coventry will be played a week earlier thanthe 1977 event.

"The overwhelming support of last year's Sara Coventry event and the public response was a major factor in our decision to return to Round Hill", Van Tyle said.

The Sarah Coventry executive also cited what she called " a great facility which Round Hill offers us, plus the help of hundreds of volunteers (from the beneficiaries of the gate receipts, the Children's Home and Cousteau Societies)" as reasons for coming back to Alamo.

Last year, the women's classic attracted 98 out of the top 100 top LPGA money winners, drawn by the size of the Coventry's purse.

"We are looking forward to attracting at least the same great field this time around", Van Tyle said.

Round Hill General manager Jay Bedsworth, the man responsible for bringing the LPGA to this area — first with the old Lincoln-Mercury Classic and last year with the Sarah Coventry — was elated by the decision.

Bedsworth noted, "Now that the drought is over, I can assure the players of perfect playing conditions at Round Hill. This is an event that not only gives the area prestige, but is backed completely by merchants in the area".

In addition, Bedsworth pointed out, the Sarah Coventry will again be telecastnationally.

The Wednesday pro-am is one of the most poplular phases of the events the tournament. Because of the heavy demand for amateur berths, Bedsworth urged those who plan to participate to sign up early. "We'll take them on a first signed, first play basis," Bedsworth noted.

Big winner in last year's Sarah Coventry was Jane Blalock, who carted home a check for $15,000 for first place after tying Betty Burfeindt for the pro-am title.

The LPGA made its debut at Round Hill in 1969 and ran four years before Lincol-Mercury dropped its sponsorship. In 1973, Bedsworth was gone and so was the tournament. He returned to Round Hill in 1976 and last year he brought in the Sarah Coventry.

The 1977 tourney at Round Hill drew four-figure crowds every day of the event, with huge crowds on hand for the third and fourth rounds.

Williams meets Larrieu at Examiner Games

DALY CITY — Cheri Williams of Livermore will be facing some tough competition when she participates in the women's open 1,000 yard run at the Examiner Games tomorrow night at the Cow Palace here.

Among the athletes the Livermore High School senior will be up against is Francie Larrieu of the Pacific Coast Club, the world record holder in the women's 1,000 meter run at 2:40.2.

Francie is also an Olympic veteran and looms as the favorite in the race. Other competitors in the race include, Judy Graham of the West Valley Track Club, Roxanne Bier of San Jose and Ann Wotherspoon of San Jose.

There will be plenty of competition in the open men's events too.

The high jump features Olympic champion Jacek Wszola of Poland and new indoor record holder Franklin Jacobs of Fairleigh-Dickinson (7-foot-7¼). Other competitors include former world record holder Dwight Stones and Olympic Silver medalist Greg Joy of Canada.

Cal-State Hayward's Dave Haber is also entered in the competition and has a best of 7-foot-4.

"We always bring Dave around slowly early in the season," said Pioneer coach Don Chu. "But we're hoping he can go at least 7-foot-5 this season."

Williams will run at 9:45 p.m. and the high jump begins at 8:45 p.m.

ting a lot of good shots, but they weren't falling." The Dons pretty well shut off guard John Farfan, who was hounded by AV's Darren Pembroke defensively. "He (Pembroke) is six-two," reminded Erceg, "and it makes it hard on John (who is 5-7). Pembroke did a good job."

Schweiger and Patterson topped 'Poke scorers, each getting 14 points, while Farfan scored ten. Pembroke scored nine for the Dons, including a crucial free throw near the end of regulation that kept the Dons in the game.

Monte Vista 55, Foothill 48

The Mustangs remained in fourth place and held their playoff position by taking a 29-19 halftime lead and holding on for the win. MV is now 7-6, while the Falcons fell to 3-10.

Randy Woods led all scorers with 15 points for the Mustangs, while Mike Shepanek and Rich Gray each had ten.

Mike Buckley paced the Falcons with 14 points, while Rick Rosenbach scored 13 and Mitch Pereira nine.

Granada 61, San Ramon 47

Behind the steady play of Dan Lambert and Steve Robison, the Matadors held the lead throughout most of the game in improving their EBAL mark to 8-5.

The Wolves, who actually had faint playoff hopes coming into the contest had them stripped completely following the loss and Monte Vista's win.

Lambert pumped in 22 points, while Robison scored 12. On the rebounding side, Matt Watson — filling in for injured Scott Morton — grabbed 12 rebounds and Lambert picked off 14.

California 79, Dublin 60

The Grizzlies remained in playoff contention with an impressive offensive show.

Chuck Cary continued his outstanding play for the 6-7 San Ramon school by scoring 28 points, 15 of which came in the second quarter when the Grizzlies pulled out to a 31-24 halftime lead.

AV to host cage all-stars

The Alameda County Fair Association Board of Directors have apparently dismissed the idea of holding the annual Alameda - Contra Costa all-star high school basketball game at the Fairgrounds this year.

The game, which is scheduled to be played at Amador Valley High School in July, runs in direct conflict with the fair run.

Bears lose

Both Stanford and California lost heartbreaking decisions to visiting Oregon and Oregon State, respectively, last night in Pacific-Eight Conference basketball action.

Despite 33 points by junior guard Gene Ransom the Bears lost a last-second 70-68 decision to Oregon State.

Stanford missed a last-second shot from midcourt with no time left and fell 65-64 to Oregon.

Paul Gronenayer is the goal tender.

Despite the fact De LaSalle got off to a slow start this year, they still defeated West Catholic League champion Riordan of San Francisco in a non-league game.

"I feel our league is much better than that one (West Catholic)," commented Thyrring. "We have four or five players who could do well in any league."

In the Amador Valley Tournament De LaSalle lost to California of the EBAL 3-2 but smashed Marina 9-0 in a consolation contest.

Slumping Warriors take on Phoenix

OAKLAND — "It mystifies me."

That's all Al Attles can say when asked what happened to his Golden State Warriors after they had gotten over the hump with a win over rugged Denver last week.

Since the victory, which put the Warriors on the good side of .500 for the first time in months, the Warriors have lost successive games to Los Angeles, San Antonio and Boston.

And it doesn't get easier tonight when Phoenix, in second-place in the ultra-competitive Pacific Division, invades the Coliseum tonight at 8 p.m.

BORN LOSER

If you think things sometimes go wrong for you, you'll feel better after laughing at "The Born Loser" each morning in The Times Comics.

Valley hosts girls' soccer

There will be 2,000 players and 110 teams particpating in the Washington's Day Friendship Soccer Tournament tomorrow, Sunday and Monday at three sites in the valley.

The tournament, which is the largest all-girls soccer tournament in the country, will take place at the Dublin Sports Grounds, Pleasanton Sports Park and Athans Downs Sports Park in San Ramon.

Teams from all areas of California, the west coast and Canada will compete in the tournament.

6 separate brakes, shock absorbers even for the engine, a wax job your eyes may never see: inside the insides of the Mercedes-Benz 450SEL.

Put a chauffeur behind the wheel Monday to Friday—on weekends enjoy it yourself.

In the eyes of a Mercedes-Benz engineer, the examples of skill and care normally hidden from sight deep within the car are what most strongly stamp a 450SEL as a 450SEL and make it unique. Herewith, that deep-down 450SEL story—an engineer's-eye view.

6,000 invisible welds

Observe that beneath its high-gloss enamel, the 450SEL body is a semimonocoque or "unitized" structure—a steel hull in effect, studded with no fewer than 6,000 electric welds.

Between the time it first enters and finally leaves the paint shop, this body acquires 77 pounds' worth of protective coatings applied in 9 steps. Anti-corrosion wax is even sprayed into hollow recesses like the insides of the rocker panels before they are permanently sealed.

Almost 5 feet of hiproom

The 450SEL body shell is the largest Mercedes-Benz builds in volume production and the word for its interior space is ample. Yet this so-called "big" Mercedes is contained within an overall length of less than 18 feet—and at 73.6 inches of width is actually slimmer than a Nash Rambler compact of 28 years ago.

Linked to its own separate axle, each rear wheel of the 450SEL is freed to act on its own. Result: the left wheel can hit a bump or a dip without affecting the right, and vice versa. Each shock absorber has an upper chamber filled with oil and a lower chamber filled with pressurized nitrogen gas as a cushion against vibration.

Excessive vibration is good for neither a car nor its occupants. The engine's rubber-insulated mounts are augmented by two special hydraulic shock absorbers nestled on either side of the 450SEL's 4.5-liter V-8.

Examine the steering system and you will find yet another shock absorber, expressly meant to soak up thumps and bumps before they reach your hands on the wheel.

A black box that isn't there

The engineers eliminated pushrod-actuated valves and their adjustment (as well as their clatter) from the 450SEL engine by giving it overhead camshafts instead. Fuel injection is standard—but note: Mercedes-Benz began using fuel injection so long ago (in 1954) that the 450SEL has passed beyond the computerized "little black box" concept to a CIS, or Continuous Injection System, of simplified mechanical design.

2 agile tons

If you could peek inside the 450SEL's 3-speed automatic transmission you would find that all shafts and gears in the mechanism are mounted on roller or ball bearings.

This two-ton automobile is maneuvered via a power-assisted steering system based on the recirculating-ball principle. You can ease from lock to lock in a mere 2.7 turns.

Count all the brakes

It is an intriguing fact that the 450SEL is fitted with six separate brakes, of two different types:

☐ Four disc brakes, each 11 inches in diameter, provide the basic stopping force. The front discs are honeycombed with internal ventilation slots for more rapid heat dissipation.

☐ Two drum brakes, one at each rear wheel, handle parking and emergency braking needs.

Velour, veneer, bituminous foil

Soft velour carpeting lies underfoot in the 450SEL. Also underfoot but out of sight: felt, foam-backed rubber matting and even bituminous foil, discreet allies in the engineers' quiet war against engine and road noise.

The built-in AM/FM stereo cassette unit has four wide-range speakers. Vacuum power instantly locks or unlocks all four doors, the trunk and the fuel filler port with the twist of a key. The built-in automatic cruise control device is a machine with a memory, able to return the car to a preset speed after you have speeded up or slowed down.

You can specify either leather upholstery or plush velour at no extra cost. You should know that inside the seats are five separate layers of padding and lining, laid overtop a network of steel springs.

Those rich fillets of trim that look like walnut veneer are walnut veneer. That dashboard clock is not a clock—it is a quartz-crystal chronometer.

Final revelation: The 60-page Mercedes-Benz brochure covers safety features built into the 450SEL and other models. This makes fascinating reading before you buy the car, and comforting reading afterward.

Engineered like no other car in the world

People give many reasons for choosing a Mercedes-Benz. But the company's aim in designing and constructing them is doggedly single-minded. It is to build safe, comfortable, practical cars with as few imperfections as possible.

This philosophy puts engineering ahead of petty economies and precludes the pea-pod mass production of inexpensive cars. It allows little room for compromise, or for shortcuts; just the pursuit of engineering excellence.

Porsche drivers going round-the-world

NEW YORK — Times Square will be the starting point Sunday for two Austrians who will drive a just-introduced Porsche 928 to commemorate the first 'round-the-world auto race that started there 70 years ago to the day.

Rudi Lins, a race driver, and Gerhard Plattner, a journalist, will drive Porsche's newest model (and first V-8) across the U.S. to San Francisco; then they will head north to Fairbanks and back east to Montreal, covering some 12,000 miles in North America.

From Montreal, their bright orange sports coupe will be flown to Frankfurt, W. Germany, for the European stage of their effort. In Europe, they will travel through Scandinavia to Moscow and back west through Berlin to Paris.

The 1908 event — from New York to Paris — lasted 170 days and covered 21,000 miles, including the wastes of Siberia.

With better highways and the advanced engineering of the $26,000 Porsche 928, the Lins/Pattner team is sure to beat that time. The Porsche salute to those magnificent men and their horseless carriages is designed to demonstrate the reliability and grand touring capabilities of the luxurious new model which goes on sale in the U.S. next month.

Powered by a 4.5-liter, all-aluminum V-8, the 928 has performance standards normally associated with race cars: 0 to 60 mph in 7.7 seconds and a test track top speed of over 140 mph. But it is also a tractable, comfortable and luxurous auto and the long-distance run will emphasize those qualities.

AUTOMOTIVE

The original race was won by an American car, a Thomas Flyer, built in Buffalo, N.Y. The car is preserved in Harrah's Auto Collection in Reno, Nevada, and Lins and Plattner are expected to stop by to pay their respects on their way to the coast.

The Thomas Flyer set a number of firsts in its run: a cross country winter record of 41 days, 8 hours and 15 minutes to San Francisco; the first car to cross Japan and, of course, the first from New York to Paris — the hard way.

Other entries, like the Thomas Flyer long-gone from the automotive scene, included a Protos, built in Berlin: it was a six-cylinder, 6,000 pound machine that carried 176 gallons of fuel and was capable of 70 mph fully loaded; a French DeDion-Bouton, whose equipment included sails that the crew planned to use crossing Siberia; a one-cylinder Sizaire-Naudin from France; an Italian Zust, a four-cylinder 40 horsepower car whose crew almost froze to death in a blizzard outside Chicago and a Motobloc, also French.

Only three cars finished the run to Paris: the Thomas, the Protos and the Zust, the latter preserved in a museum in Europe. Alexander E. Breckwoldt, vice president in charge of the Porsche Audi Division of Volkswagen of America, said, "What they proved was that the horseless carriage had arrived and that personal mobility around the world was in the offering."

Energy saver

Helen Fuqua tests Chevrolet car parts in a Detroit gear and axle plant to determine which need forging for durability. The practice cuts down the forging process and saves 36 million cubic feet of furnace fuel a year.

Chrysler sees shift to manual shift

Detroit — As the auto industry continues to downshift its car sizes, more new car buyers will be shifting, too. Chrysler equipment planners say that increasing demand for smaller, gas-saving vehicles is reviving popularity of the manual-type transmission which began a steady decline during the 1950's in favor of the "automatics."

"While the overwhelming majority of today's drivers still choose an automatic over a manual transmission, our sales figures indicate a growing 'four on the floor' trend," said Bill King, Chrysler Corporation's manager of equipment volume planning. "For example, while 95 percent of all U.S. model cars sold in '77 had automatics, more than half of all Dodge Colts sold wereequipped with four-speed manual transmissions.

"That's partly because a 'four-speed' offers better acceleration and performance, something especially desirable with fuel-efficient four-cylinder engines."

Likewise, King predicts that 30 percent of the new Dodge Omnis sold this year will have four-speed manuals to complement four-cylinder, transverse-mounted engines."

King believes many buyers moving from larger cars to smaller models will be shifting for themselves for the first time. But to some, the manual way is nothing new. Many economy-minded drivers who've always bought six-cylinder engines have never been swayed by automatic transmission convenience, opting instead for the better mileage and performance of a manual.

Sports car enthusiasts also have insisted on shifting themselves, not only for performance's sake but purely for the enjoyment offeeling closer to the car's operation.

For example, a higher proportion of 1977 Aspen buyers selected a manual transmission on the lower-priced models equipped with six-cylinder power plants, than did those selecting V-8's and more luxury options.

Younger, sporty-minded buyers often insist on "four on the floor" when ordering custom high performance packages such as the Aspen R/T Super Pack.

Economical and sporty appeal are two reasons why a greater proportion of young car buyers prefer to shift their own cars. Of all the cars sold in 1976, one out of three buyers in the under-20 age group bought manuals, while less than 10 percent o of the over-50 crowd chose to do so.

The predicted shift to manuals via smaller cars won't leave the automatic trans fans stranded, however. King said the convenience of letting a car shift for itself will be around for a long time. That's good news for those desiring more luxurious cars whose buyers seldom want a manual transmission. Dodge Monaco, for instance, offered one on its 1977 model and only one percent of its buyers took advantage of the opportunity.

"Even with the expected decline in the V-8's availability, automatic transmissions will continue to dominate the market, especially on cars with six-cylinder engines," King said. "In fact, we may even see an increase in the proportion of six-cylinder power plants sold with automatics."

New compact

Lincoln-Mercury's new compact car, the Zephyr, comes in two and four-door models with a 2.3-liter four-cylinder engine and four speed transmission.

Revolution in weight-saving parts forecast

Washington — A two-fold increase in use of polyester/glass sheet molding compound (SMC) vehicle parts in U. S. passenger car and truck manufacture by 1982 was predicted by a leading Chevrolet plastics manufacturing engineer.

Speaking before a Society of Plastics Industry group meeting at the Shoreham Hotel in Washington, D. C., Robert O. Hester, general superintendent-master mechanic at the Pressed Metal Plant of Chevrolet Motor Division in Flint, Mich., said that weight-saving and resizing programs of GM's complete line of cars and trucks, as well as similar programs by other domestic automakers, will be instrumental in increasing future demand for SMC vehicle parts.

GM's resizing product program began in 1976 and is expected to continue into the early 1980's.

"Current usage of SMC for the manufacture of the nation's passenger cars and trucks is estimated to be 160,000,000 pounds with a projected growth to some 300,000,000 pounds by 1982," Hester said.

First used by the automative industry in the late 1960's for headlamp housings and station wagon air spoilers, SMC usage has increased substantially, according to Hester.

"The first SMC parts produced by Chevrolet are front end panels for the 1978 Chevrolet Monte Carlo, Malibu Classic and Malibu models," Hester said. "Other industry-wide applications include its use in deflector panels, window frames, wheel opening covers, hoods, cabs, doors, engine covers, and even truck tops."

Advantages of SMC over other materials include:

— weight savings of 15-40 percent
— impressive parts reduction. The one-piece 1978 Monte Carlo header replaces a total of seven parts fastened together to form a similar assembly in the 1977 Monte Carlo — less assembly labor as well as substantial savings in tooling costs
— crisp styling lines, providing latitude in design concepts
— more cost effective model changes and "face lifts"

Hester said Chevrolet accelerated its SMC program in May, 1976, with a team of ten top technical people specializing in plactics.

"After 14 months of dedicated work, they had Chevrolet's SMC operation in production and began shipping parts to assembly plants for the 1978 model run.

"Our assembly plant feedback tells us now that Monte Carlo, Malibu Classic and Malibu SMC front end panels are high quality with surface finishes equal to or surpassing other materials," Hester said.

Firefighters turn to small 4-wheel drive trucks

Detroit — Small, maneuverable, four-wheel drive fire trucks have become the "hottest' sellers for fire apparatus manufacturers.

Fire departments throughout the United States and Canada have turned their attention toward these modern, versatile emergency fire units and manufacturers have responded to the demand.

Called mini-pumpers or Quick Attack Pumpers, these units have already proved themselves effective for the majority of fire calls.

Another reason for popularity of the mini-pumper, now produced by a number of fire equipment manufacturers, is that it is economical not only in the original purchase cost, but also in operation and maintenance.

Fully equipped, these compact pumpers sell for about $24,000 — about one-third the price of a standard size pumper.

Officials at Pierce Manufacturing Inc. of Appleton, Wis., one of the nations largest fire apparatus manufacturers, have found the popularity of the mini-pumper has skyrocketed in the last two years.

The company, which also produces a variety of fire fighting equipment up to large snorkel units and 100-foot aerial ladder bodies, now produces more than 275 mini-pumpers a year, and has been a prime developer of the unit.

"Small pumpers have been around for ten years or so, but it has just been in the last few years that they have been one of our biggest sellers," said Clark Baumann, Pierce sales representaive.

"Until 1976 these mini-pumpers had a miximum Gross Vehicle Weight of 10,000 pounds and few, if any, had four wheel drive," he said. "That was the heaviest chassis any auto manufacturer would supply us.

"Chrysler Corporation and its Dodge truck engineers worked colosely with us, and developed an 11,000-pound GVW chassis and this has been the one used by us and most other manufacturers who produce such pumpers.

"We have found that Dodge, n addition to its four-wheel drive, produced the stongest chassis, capable of carrying the most payloan," Baumann said.

The foundation for these mini-pumpers is Dodge's W-400 chassis with heavy duty suspension system, cooling and transmission, and dual rear wheels. Included are front fenders, hood and cab.

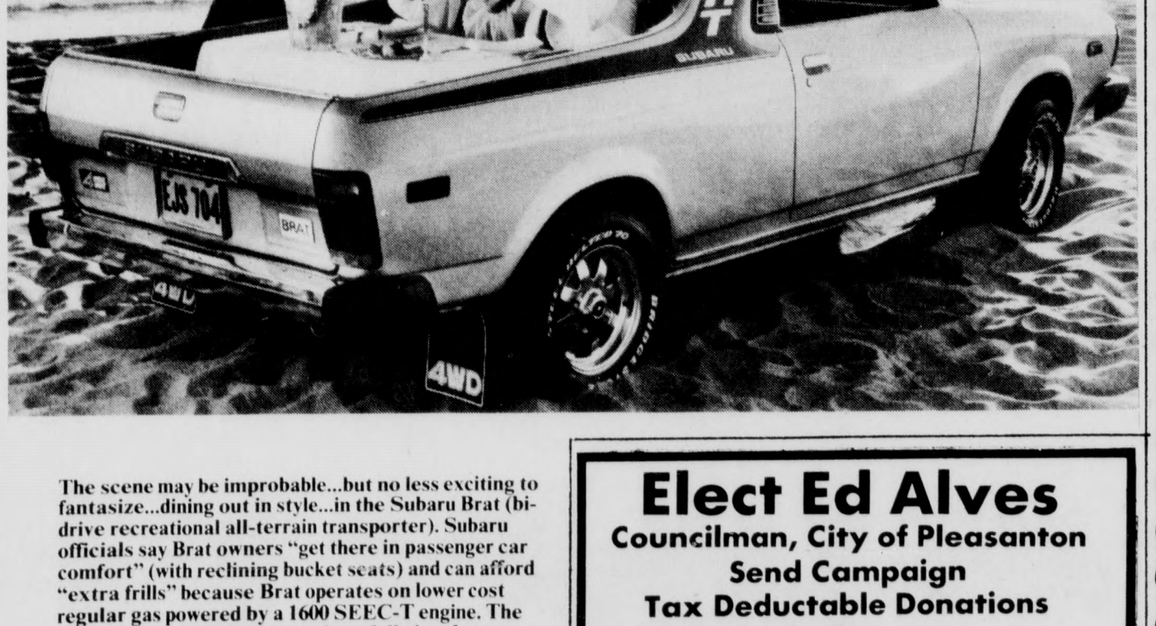

"We order the units from Dodge in basic black because our customers order their fire trucks in a variety of colors," Baumann said.

"The traditional red fire truck is almost a thing of the past. In addition to red, we are requested to supply fire trucks in white, yellow, two-tones and such a variety of colors that we paint them ourselves.

"For example we recently delivered a mini-pumper in candy apple red with gold metal flake!"

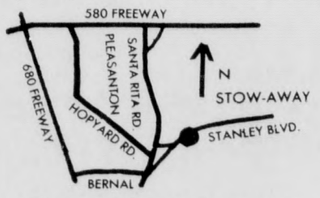

Pierce and other manufacturers fabricate the body on the Dodge chassis, Included are such items as a 250-gallon water tank, wenches up to 8,000 pound capacity, 110 volt power supply, quartz lights, emergency flllasher lights, a variety of compartments for rescue tools and equipment, ladder recks and 1-⅜ and 2-⅜ inch hoses.

Fire statistics show that 80 percent of all fires are what the profession calls nusiance fires.

The scene may be improbable...but no less exciting to fantasize...dining out in style...in the Subaru Brat (bi-drive recreational all-terrain transporter). Subaru officials say Brat owners "get there in passenger car comfort" (with reclining bucket seats) and can afford "extra frills" because Brat operates on lower cost regular gas powered by a 1600 SEEC-T engine. The go-anywhere model converts from full-time front wheel drive to 4-wheel drive at the flick of a switch.

Bankers charged with credit card tricks

By JEFFREY MILLS
Assocated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many banks that issue credit cards are levying new finance charges but few consumers can wade through the legalistic language that tells them they're paying higher rates, the staff of a House panel says. The banks are devising "new schemes to reap more revenue from credit card users," the staff of the House banking subcommittee on consumers said in a memo to Chairman Frank Annunzio, D-Ill. A copy of the memo was obtained by The Associated Press.

The memo cited this section of one disclosure statement as an example of the confusing language consumers sometimes confront:

"The Finance Charge at periodic rate for purchases is computed by (i) multiplying each portion of the Purchases Finance Charge Balance shown on the face of the statement by the Number of Days in Billing Cycle, (ii) applying to the resulting products the applicable daily periodic rate of .04109 percent, (iii) adding these products together."

What that means, in simple English, is that the 15 percent finance charge is based on the purchaser's average daily balance starting from the day he makes his purchase.

The staff memo said "numerous pieces of evidence are now available that indicate that bankers have not only purposely begun using methods which would be difficult to understand, but they have taken pride in designing disclosure statements that will confuse."

"This office has a tape of a banker announcing to other bankers that his statement of the charge went uncommented on by all his customers except the attorneys of those who paid in full each month," it said.

The memo says banks have "changed the rules of the game after hooking consumers into the (credit card) service."

The subcommittee staff memo said the new charges began more than 18 months ago when the giant Citibank of New York started levying a 50 cent charge on Master Charge bills of those who pay their monthly bills in full. The extra charge, which was clear to everyone paying it, was dropped early this year because of consumer resistence.

A new, more subtle development involves banks computing the finance charge from the time of purchase rather than after the customary 25-day grace period, the memo said.

This charge is obvious only to the minority of credit card users who pay their bills in full. The majority, accustomed to paying finance charges, is less likely to notice the new — and more expensive — way of computing this charge.

Bill Moroney, a spokesman for the American Bankers Association, said that any confusing language results from the Truth-in-Lending Act and government regulations that enforce it. "We are supporting a bill in the Senate to change the law. We'd love to see the language simplified," he said. The staff memo quoted an estimate by an unnamed accounting firm that the new method of computing finance charges could cost consumers $580 million per year in extra charges.

Black history fight is still not over

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — President Carter, supported by scores of public officials, has proclaimed February "National Afro-American History Month." But some feel black history's long fight for acceptance is far from over. "I don't think we should be led astray by proclamations," said Dr. St. Clair Drake, Stanford University professor emeritus and one-time head of the Afro-American Studies department. "Black history has a role in trying to reeducate the broader American public. I don't think that task has really been addressed yet."

Problems may exist, but there's no denying improvements have been made since the late Carter G. Woodson and some supporters founded the Association for the Study of Negro (later, Afro-American) Life and History in Chicago in September, 1915.

He began celebrating Negro History Week in 1926, spanning the birthdays of Frederick Douglass and Abraham Lincoln during the second week in February. For years it was an event only blacks celebrated.

"Woodson found difficulty in getting Americans to listen to what he had to say," said J. Rupert Picott, the association's executive secretary. Picott added that while blacks then were not as proud of their African heritage as they might have been, that has changed.

"There is a climate now in which people will listen, headed by the new black American confidence in themselves," he said.

Black history celebrations were expanded to a month during the Bicentennial. The association convinced mayors of nearly 100 major cities and governors of several states to make black history proclamations this month.

But there still is some disagreement over whether the study of the black experience is getting its rightful due.

"We haven't won this battle at all," said Lerone Bennett, author and senior editor at Ebony Magazine. "We have to keep in mind that every month in the year is white history month ... Until we get equal time we're in trouble."

Bennett, 49, said in an interview that gains in black studies have eroded since the '60s. "With the conservative reaction of the '70s, administrators used it to cut back the already meager funds."

Drake, 67, said one of Woodson's main goals was to incorporate black history into standard history books — a goal Drake says has not been reached. But Dr. John Hope Franklin, the 63-year-old "dean" of black history, insisted the field is in good standing. "As an area of intellectual inquiry and academic pursuit, I don't think there is any question that it is an established field," he said.

Franklin, University of Chicago history professor, is vice president of the association and president-elect of the predominantly white American Historical Society, the nation's oldest and largest professional historical organization.

He said adequate funds are there for research in black history, but more blacks need to take on the task of setting the record straight.

Woodson's association now has 139 chapters and 125,000 members, and both Bennett and Franklin agreed credit is due Woodson and his sup-

Full load for water projects

SACRAMENTO (AP) — State predictions, boosted by January rains, call for full deliveries to State Water Project contractors this year, water officials said Thursday.

The new prediction is 2 million acre feet, up 711,000 from its estimate a month ago.

The amount is more than the total of 1.8 million acre feet the state's customers are entitled to.

State Water Resources Director Ron Robie said some of the surplus will be distributed to agencies who were shortchanged last year, and some will be held in reserve.

Robie said it now appears that Southern California water agencies won't have to give up part of their 1978 state water entitlement to Northern California, as they had agreed to do.

Haldeman book leak by Post causes stir

NEW YORK (AP) — The Washington Post's publication of parts of former White House aide H.R. Haldeman's upcoming book occurred despite elaborate security precautions by its publisher and caused trouble for newspapers that had planned to publish excerpts next week.

The Post, in its Thursday editions, gave this explanation of how it got the material: "The latter two-thirds of the book was made available to the Washington Post, and it adds new insight and facts about the Watergate scandal and the history of the Nixon administration."

No other information about how the Post got the material from Haldeman's book, "The Ends of Power," was available.

Leonard Schwartz, vice president for marketing at the Quadrangle Books, said that extraordinary precautions had been taken to prevent any leak of the manuscript before its publication by newspapers that had paid for excerpts.

He said the original manuscript had been seen only by Haldeman; Joseph DiMona, who helped Haldeman write the book; and the president of Quadrangle, a subsidiary of the New York Times Co. and the book's publisher.
